

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN IN TRIAL OF CASEMENT

Even Sir Roger Yawns, Despite Fact
He Is Making Fight
for Life.

PUBLIC PAYS SMALL ATTENTION

Eyes of People Now Turned From Courtroom, With Its Tension Hearing, to Battle Fields on Continent
and the Present Crisis.

LONDON, June 27.—The second day of the trial of Sir Roger Casement for high treason opened with no change in the apathetic attitude with which the general public regards the case.

The principal reason offered for this lack of interest is that the attention of the country is focused upon the Continent where what possibly may prove the decisive phase of the great war is as a crucial stage on both the eastern and western fronts.

The atmosphere of the courtroom is not that of a trial for life, and the chief justice was compelled yesterday to insist that there must be no laughter in court. The laughter was evoked by the rich brogue and smart repartee of the Irish soldier witnesses.

ATTITUDE OF CASEMENT

NOT ONE OF GRAVITY

The attitude of Casement himself is far from being one of gravity. He appears neither crushed nor subdued by the seriousness of his position, and takes the proceedings in a most casual manner. Much of the time he appears abstracted and even yawns frequently. With folded arms or head resting on his hand he usually has the air of being bored except when he chats with the three policemen who sit around him in the iron-barred dock.

The prisoner appeared cheerful as he entered the dock today.

The prosecution resumed the introduction of testimony immediately. The witnesses were the same as those called at the preliminary hearings, and a few new points were brought out during the early proceedings. Witnesses gave accounts of the movements of Sir Roger and his companions, Captain Robert Montagu and Daniel J. Bailey, from the time of their landing on the morning of Good Friday in a boat from the German submarine near Tralee, until the arrest of Sir Roger.

John McCarthy, an Irish farmer, described finding the boat in which the three men were said to have landed, and told of discovering buried on the beach two handbags containing revolvers and ammunition.

Mary Gordon, a servant girl, identified Sir Roger as one of the three men she met hurrying away from the beach early Friday morning. She was followed by Thomas Hearn, a sergeant, in the Irish constabulary, who told of tracing Sir Roger to the ruined fort in the vicinity of which he arrested him.

Hearn identified revolvers, maps of Ireland and a flag of the revolutionists which were found in a handbag. There was a stir as the big green emblem of the rebels was spread out in the center of the room, and all eyes turned towards the prisoner. He shifted uneasily in his seat and then leaned back with folded arms, smiling nervously.

Alexander Sullivan, chief counsel for the defense, volunteered the information to the court that the emblem on the flag was that of the city of Limerick.

WITNESS TELLS OF UNREST PREVALENT IN IRELAND

Mr. Sullivan cross-examined the police witnesses in regard to the general unrest in Ireland and brought out the fact that the people of the south were arming themselves against those of the north and against conscription, and that after the Curragh incident, when the military refused to serve against the south, the southerners felt they could not trust the soldiers to protect them against Ulster volunteers.

"One police witness said that although the carrying of arms and drilling went on unhampered by the authorities, the landing of arms would have had a very grave effect."

During the testimony of Constable Riley, who assisted in the arrest, the prosecution introduced a code Sir Roger is said to have thrown away. This paper was picked up and given to Riley. The prosecution contends this code was intended for communication with Germans.

Opposite a series of numbers were sentences such as "Send cannon and ammunition" and "Send more explosives."

The prosecution attempted to establish that some of the pencilled figures were German characters.

A large number of witnesses appeared for the prosecution. Much of the testimony was corroborative.

Sidney Waghorne, signalman on the British patrol-boat Bluebell, told the oft-repeated story as to how the ammunition ship Aud was held up on suspicion by the Bluebell off Tralee and the crew blew her up on nearing Queenstown. A diver identified rifles and ammunition he found on the wrecked Aud. It is claimed the steamship carried 20,000 rifles and ammunition.

The prosecution laid emphasis on maps found in the handbag on the beach. Colonel Gordon, a map expert, testified they were foreign reproductions of British ordnance maps.

The prosecution rested suddenly shortly after the luncheon recess, and the Attorney-General announced he had no statement to make.

Mr. Sullivan immediately began an address in an attempt to have the indictment quashed. His argument was an effort to show that the alleged treasonable acts were committed outside British realms, and could not be tried in Great Britain.

PROHIBITIONISTS HAVE EYES ON PROGRESSIVES

Former Followers of Roosevelt Are Asked to Cast Their Lot
With "Drys."

BIG CONFERENCE PROPOSED

Homeless Moores Who Do Not Want
to Return to Democratic or Republican Parties Are Offered Political Refuge.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Urged to remain in the vice-presidential race by fellow-Progressives who are opposed to Charles E. Hughes for President, John M. Parker, named as Colonel Roosevelt's running-mate by the recent Progressive convention, said to-day he would return to his Louisiana home and "think it over" before deciding on his course. Leaders of the Prohibition party intimated to-day that he might be their vice-presidential nominee if he remained on the Progressive ticket. Bainbridge Colby, of New York, and other Progressives who opposed the action of the National Progressive Committee in endorsing the candidacy of Mr. Hughes yesterday, to-day assured Mr. Parker that if he remained in the campaign he would receive the support of all loyal members of that party.

PROGRESSIVES ARE ASKED TO JOIN IN CONFERENCE

The following open letter to Progressives was given out to-night by Virgil G. Hinshaw, national chairman of the Prohibition party:

"In view of the fact that the Progressive party, through the action of your national committee, will have no
national ticket this year, thus presenting to the voters of the party the alternative of returning to the Republican and Democratic parties from which you came or joining forces with another third party, with whose principles you may agree, we, therefore, extend to all forward-looking men and women of the Progressive party an invitation to join with the Prohibitionists and other reform forces of the country in a get-together conference on July 15 in St.
Paul, Minn., with a view to finding a common political ground on which to fight for the welfare of humanity and to have a part in the nomination of a national ticket that shall represent all progressive citizens, and that cannot be bartered away for selfish ends by any individual."

"The needs of our nation call for an amalgamation of the righteous elements of our citizenship as never before. Let no thought of possible failure or personal aggrandizement deter any man or woman from responding to your country's call. The same boss-ridden elements which forced men and women of conviction to leave the old parties four years ago and become Progressives still rule in these parties. The conscience back of the Progressive party is not dead. May it lead on to victory, for the uplifting of humanity and the preservation of the moral integrity of the nation."
